

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

JOAQUIN MURRIETTA MARTINEZ,
Petitioner,
vs.
JEFFREY BEARD, Secretary,
Defendant.

Case No.: 13-cv-1457-BTM (WVG)

FINAL REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION OF UNITED STATES MAGISTRATE JUDGE ON PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

I. INTRODUCTION

Petitioner Joaquin Murrietta Martinez (“Petitioner”), a California state prisoner proceeding pro se, has filed this petition for a writ of habeas corpus, challenging his first degree murder conviction entered in San Diego County Superior Court. The case has been referred to this Court pursuant to Civil Local Rule 72.1(d)(4) for prepared findings of fact and recommendation for disposition. For the reasons discussed below, the Court RECOMMENDS that the petition be DENIED in its entirety WITH PREJUDICE.

1 II. FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

2 A. Trial

3 This Court gives deference to state court findings of fact and presumes them to be 4 correct; a habeas petitioner may rebut the presumption of correctness, but only by clear and 5 convincing evidence. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(e)(1). The following facts are taken from the 6 California Court of Appeal slip opinion denying Petitioner's direct appeal:

7 Martinez, a homeless drug addict, accepted an invitation from Hardoy
8 to move into a house she leased in Oceanside, where several other previously 9 homeless drug addicts also resided. Martinez and Hardoy had a sexual 10 relationship for a few months, but that ended when Lisa Brown moved into 11 the house and Martinez began having sex with her. Over the next several 12 months, various drug addicts moved in and out, the atmosphere became 13 increasingly negative and hostile, and the premises degenerated into a 14 flophouse for persons addicted to methamphetamine or heroin.

15 The financial situation of those living at Hardoy's house also gradually 16 deteriorated. When Hardoy exhausted her inheritance and could no longer 17 pay the rent or other bills, Martinez began robbing banks with Brown, Joseph 18 Cooper and others living at the house to pay the household bills and support 19 their drug habits. Hardoy knew about these bank robberies, and she 20 periodically argued with Martinez and threatened to report them to the police.

21 The last of these arguments was overhead by Yesenia Green, an 22 acquaintance of Martinez. Martinez left the house with Green and her friend 23 because of the argument. When Green and her friend drove Martinez back to 24 Hardoy's house a few hours later, Green's friend said to Martinez, "Okay.
25 We'll be back." Martinez responded, "Okay. But by the time you guys get 26 back, the bitch will be dead."

27 A few days later, Martinez and Brown met Cooper and others at a 28 motel. Cooper told Martinez they needed to go back to Hardoy's house to 29 retrieve some things, but Martinez told Cooper they could not go to the house

1 because Hardoy's corpse was there. Martinez also said he needed Cooper to 2 help him dispose of the corpse, and Cooper agreed to do so.

3 Martinez then drove Cooper and Brown back to Hardoy's house.
 4 Cooper testified that on the way there, Brown told him Martinez had 5 "poisoned" Hardoy, but when Hardoy did not die right away Martinez
 6 smothered her with a pillow. [FN 1: Martinez testified at trial that he "[did]n't 7 remember ever hearing" Brown say he smothered Hardoy with a pillow; he 8 also denied killing Hardoy, but admitted injecting her with heroin.
 9 Toxicological tests performed on Hardoy's remains revealed 10 methamphetamine and morphine, a metabolite of heroin. The tests were 11 negative for the anticoagulants contained in poisons commonly used for pest 12 control.] Brown also said Martinez killed Hardoy because she was a "rat" who 13 had threatened "to call the cops." [FN 2: On cross-examination, Martinez 14 admitted Hardoy had "threatened to call the cops on [him]" and described her as a "yapping chihuahua." He also testified that if he ever encountered a
 "snitch" in prison, he would stab the "snitch" in the neck.] According to Cooper, as Brown related these facts Martinez "didn't do anything. He kept driving. He just kind of nodd[ed] his head and was kind of pretty serious about getting what had to be done, done, which was getting rid of the body."

15 When Martinez, Brown and Cooper arrived at Hardoy's house, they 16 went to a bedroom where Hardoy's corpse lay across the bed. Martinez 17 testified he wanted to dismember Hardoy's corpse so that it could not be 18 identified and traced back to the bank robberies. He therefore "took out the 19 dental records" by bashing the corpse's face with a baseball bat and using a 20 machete "to be sure that the teeth were all knocked [out]." To eliminate 21 fingerprints and footprints, Martinez used the machete to chop off Hardoy's 22 hands, and Cooper used it to chop off her feet. Martinez wrapped the 23 dismembered hands and feet in plastic bags and stuffed them into a backpack; he and Cooper wrapped the rest of the Hardoy's corpse in blankets and stuffed it into a duffel bag. Martinez and Cooper discarded the duffel bag in a 24 dumpster in Escondido. Brown discarded the backpack in a dumpster in Vista.

25 While Cooper was testifying at trial, the prosecutor asked him what 26 Brown had told him during the ride from the motel to Hardoy's house about 27

1 how Hardoy died. Martinez's counsel objected the question for called for 2 hearsay. The trial court overruled the objection, and Cooper testified as stated 3 [above].

4 After Cooper testified at trial, Martinez's counsel advised the court that 5 Brown was available to testify and that he intended to call her as a witness the 6 following day. The court stated that it did not know why Brown had not been 7 charged in the case and that she would need an attorney to advise her about 8 testifying because her testimony might expose her to criminal liability. The 9 prosecutor advised the court that Brown had been charged with being an 10 accessory after the fact and had served a prison sentence for conviction on that 11 charge. The prosecutor also stated that in doing research for the case, he had 12 learned that someone may be charged with both being an accessory after the 13 fact and aiding and abetting a murder. Martinez's counsel agreed to arrange 14 for Brown to meet with an attorney and to appear in court the following day.

15 Brown appeared in court the next day and, to the recommendation of 16 her attorney, asserted her Fifth Amendment privilege against self-17 incrimination. Based on this assertion, the trial court ruled Brown could not 18 be called as a witness and excused her. Brown and her counsel exited the 19 courtroom.

20 The trial court then allowed Martinez's counsel "to make a record 21 regarding [Brown]." Counsel argued the People's decision to charge Brown 22 with being an accessory after the fact and her service of the sentence for that 23 crime estopped the People from subsequently charging Brown with Hardoy's 24 murder. He also argued Brown was "a vital witness for the defense." Martinez's 25 counsel stated that his "understanding from the reports and from 26 speaking to [his] investigator" was that Brown's testimony "would have been 27 radically different from what [Cooper] said." According to counsel, Brown 28 would deny she told Cooper that Martinez "said he smothered the victim...
[or] poisoned the victim or anything of the sort"; would "attack [Cooper's] statements about her being present at the time that the body was chopped up"; and would testify that Cooper "is a great big fat liar." [FN 3: In his opening brief, Martinez also asserts: "Brown would also have confirmed just who was driving the car that night: Martinez, as Cooper claimed, or Brown herself, as Martinez claimed. To the degree Brown would have confirmed Martinez's version, his credibility would have been bolstered and Cooper's diminished." Martinez, however, does not provide any record citation in support of this assertion. Our review of the record revealed that in his offer of proof, Martinez's trial counsel made no mention of any expected testimony from Brown as to who was driving the car.] Counsel concluded by asserting that Brown had given three or four interviews in which "she didn't change her story" and "would have been a solid witness for the defense."

In response to the arguments of Martinez's counsel, the trial court stated that in light of the testimony introduced at trial, Brown "could have absolutely been charged as aiding and abetting the death of [Hardoy]." The court also noted that Brown could face criminal liability if she had lied in any of her statements to the police, and that "there are also some potential federal charges." The court stated it "was not comfortable putting [Brown] on the stand without getting counsel to advise her regarding any Fifth Amendment aspects of her testimony."

The prosecutor also made some statements for the record. He reminded the court there is no limitations period for murder. He also stated: "And the People are not precluded... from charging the crime in which the proof is the strongest first"; Brown "remains a suspect in this murder"; and "it's not over. We're just looking for one additional [piece of] corroborative evidence and charges could be filed. I just don't know. It depends on the state of the evidence."

After the jury found him guilty, Martinez renewed and expanded his arguments concerning the need for Brown's testimony in a motion for new trial. He argued the trial court "erred in the decision of [a] question of law arising during the course of the trial" when it excused Brown from testifying based on her assertion of her Fifth Amendment privilege. (§ 1181, subd. 5.) Martinez also asserted, without supporting factual or legal analysis, that the court "should have either ordered the [P]eople to grant [Brown] immunity or suggested the use of her hearsay statements in this case." The People, of course, opposed the new trial motion; and the court denied it.
(Doc. No. 22-22 at 2-7.)

B. Direct Appeal

2 On August 4, 2011, Petitioner filed a direct appeal of his conviction in the California
3 Court of Appeal, Fourth Appellate District, Division One. (Doc. No. 22-20.) Petitioner
4 challenged his conviction on four grounds, each related to Brown's unavailability as a 5 witness. First, Petitioner argued that the trial court erred in permitting Brown to invoke 6 the Fifth Amendment and refuse to testify. (Id.) Second, Petitioner argued that the 7 prosecutor committed misconduct by threatening to charge Brown with murder but not 8 granting her use immunity. (Id.) Third, Petitioner argued that the trial court should have 9 granted Brown "judicial immunity." (Id.) Finally, Petitioner argued that his trial counsel
10 was ineffective for not seeking to admit the statements Brown made to a defense
11 investigator under California Evidence Code Section 1202, an exception to the California 12 hearsay rule. (Id.) The state appellate court affirmed Petitioner's conviction in a fully 13 reasoned opinion issued on September 6, 2012. (Doc. No. 22-22.) Petitioner filed his 14 Petition for Review in the California Supreme Court on October 15, 2012. (Doc. No. 22-15 23.) That court denied the Petition for Review in a summary decision issued on December 16 19, 2012. (Doc. No. 22-24.)

C. Federal Habeas Corpus Petition

18 On June 24, 2013, Petitioner filed his Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus in federal 19 court seeking relief under 28 U.S.C. § 2254. (Doc. No. 1.) The District Court dismissed the 20 Petition on July 8, 2013, for failure to satisfy the filing fee requirement, failure to name a 21 proper respondent and failure to allege exhaustion of state court remedies. (Doc. No. 2.)
22 Petitioner filed his First Amended Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus (“FAP”) on August 23 19, 2013. (Doc. No. 3.) Petitioner also filed a motion to proceed in forma pauperis, which

1 the District Court granted. (Docs. No. 4 and 5). Respondent answered the FAP on 2 December 27, 2013. (Doc. No. 21.)

3 On January 2, 2014, this Court notified Petitioner that the FAP was subject to 4 dismissal because it contained both exhausted and unexhausted claims. (Doc. No. 23.)
 5 Petitioner did not remedy this defect, and, on May 20, 2014, this Court issued a Report and 6 Recommendation (“R&R”) which recommended that the FAP be dismissed without 7 prejudice to Petitioner refiling an amended petition which contained only exhausted claims.
 8 (Doc. No. 33.) On August 19, 2014, Petitioner filed a Motion to Amend (“MTA”) asserting 9 five additional claims and a Motion for Stay and Abeyance. (Docs. No. 37 and 39.)

10 On October 16, 2014, the District Court issued an order declining to adopt the R&R.
 11 (Doc. No. 40.) In its order, the District Court noted that this Court had not addressed 12 Respondent’s contention that the unexhausted claims in the FAP should be denied with 13 prejudice under 28 U.S.C. § 2254(b)(2). (Id. at 3.) The District Court also noted that this 14 Court had not addressed whether the claims not raised in state court should be considered 15 technically exhausted because any further state filings would be procedurally barred. (Id.)

16 On December 30, 2014, the District Court issued an Order granting Petitioner’s 17 MTA. To avoid delay, the District Court consolidated the FAP and the MTA and ordered 18 that these two documents constituted the operative pleading in this action.¹ (Doc. No. 50 19 at 2.) The Court denied Petitioner’s Motion for Stay and Abeyance as moot, finding that 20 the claims not presented on direct appeal were technically exhausted and procedurally

 23 ¹ On February 17, 2015, Petitioner filed a Second Amended Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus, which, 24 with the exception of the the cover sheet, was an exact duplicate of the MTA and did not add any new 25 claims. (Doc. No. 55.)

1 defaulted due to Petitioner's failure to present them to the state court in a timely manner.
2 (Id.)

3 On March 18, 2015, Respondent answered the claims asserted in the MTA. (Doc.
4 No. 60.) Petitioner did not file a traverse.

5 IV. PETITIONER'S CONTENTIONS

6 Petitioner asserts eight grounds for relief. The first three grounds for relief were 7 presented in the FAP. (Doc. No. 3.) The remaining five grounds for relief were asserted in 8 the MTA. (Doc. No. 37.)

9 First, Petitioner claims that his trial counsel was ineffective for failing to seek the 10 admission of Brown's statement to a defense investigator under California Code of 11 Evidence section 1202. (Doc. No. 3 at 6.) Petitioner incorporates by reference, and relies 12 entirely on, the first section of his argument in the Petition for Review filed in the California
13 Supreme Court. (Doc. No. 22-23, at 14-33.)

14 Second, Petitioner claims that his rights under the Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments 15 were violated by the trial court's failure to grant Brown immunity. (Doc. No. 3 at 7.)
16 Petitioner incorporates by reference, and relies entirely on, the second section of his 17 argument in the Petition for Review filed in the California Supreme Court. (Doc. No. 22-18 23, at 34-38.)

19 Third, Petitioner claims that his trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance by 20 failing to make use of letters allegedly provided to counsel by Petitioner purportedly 21 showing that "several people made false claims [or] recanted outright!" (Doc. No. 3 at 8-22 9.)

23 Fourth, Petitioner claims that his Fifth and Sixth Amendment rights were violated 24 because the jury was shown a videotaped statement he made to the police and because he was forced to take the stand at trial to respond to that statement. (Doc. No. 37, at 3-5.)

Fifth, Petitioner claims that his appellate counsel rendered ineffective assistance by failing to raise the Fifth and Sixth Amendment claims identified in Petitioner's fourth ground for relief. (Id. at 6.)

Sixth, Petitioner argues that his trial counsel was ineffective for failing to seek the admission of medical records documenting a stroke that Petitioner suffered at age eight. (Id. at 6.)

Seventh, Petitioner argues that statement he made to Homero Hernandez were inadmissible hearsay and that their admission violated his rights under the Confrontation Clause of the Sixth Amendment. (Id. at 8.)

Eighth, Petitioner argues that his prosecution was arbitrary and discriminatory. (Id. at 9.)

V. STANDARD OF REVIEW

The Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 (“AEDPA”), Pub.L. No. 104-132, 110 Stat. 1214 (1996), applies to all habeas corpus petitions filed in federal court after April 24, 1996. Lindh v. Murphy, 521 U.S. 320, 327 (1997). This Petition was filed after that date and so is governed by AEDPA.

Under AEDPA, a federal court may grant relief to a state prisoner “only on the ground that he is in custody in violation of the Constitution or laws or treaties of the United States.” 28 U.S.C. § 2254(a). A habeas petition will not be granted with respect to any claim “adjudicated on the merits” in state court unless that adjudication “(1) resulted in a decision that was contrary to, or involved an unreasonable application of, clearly established federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court of the United States; or (2) resulted in a decision that was based on an unreasonable determination of the facts in light

1 of the evidence presented at the state court proceeding.” 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). A state court 2 decision is “contrary to” federal law only “if the state court arrives at a conclusion opposite
 3 to that reached by [the Supreme Court] on a question of law or if the state court decides a 4 case differently than [the Supreme Court] has on a set of materially indistinguishable 5 facts.” Williams v. Taylor, 529 U.S. 362, 412-13 (2000). A state court decision is an 6 “unreasonable application” of federal law only if the state court identified the governing 7 legal principles from Supreme Court decisions but unreasonably applied those principles 8 to the facts of the prisoner’s case.” Id. at 413. To warrant habeas relief, a state court’s 9 decision must be more than merely erroneous or incorrect—it must be “objectively 10 unreasonable.” Lockyer v. Andrade, 538 U.S. 63, 75 (2003); Bell v. Cone, 535 U.S. 685, 11 694 (2002).

12 When the state supreme court denies a prisoner’s claim in a summary opinion, the 13 federal habeas court “looks through” to the last “reasoned decision” in state court denying 14 the prisoner’s claim and evaluates that decision under the Section 2254(d) standards.
 15 Brumfield v. Cain, 135 S.Ct. 2269, 2276 (2015) (citing Johnson v. Williams, 133 S.Ct.
 16 1088, 1094, n. 1 (2013), and Ylst v. Nunnemaker, 501 U.S. 797, 806 (1991)). However, a 17 state court need not cite Supreme Court precedent when resolving a habeas corpus claim 18 and the failure of the state courts to explain why they have denied the prisoner relief does 19 not extinguish the presumption that the state courts have adjudicated the claim on the 20 merits. Harrington v. Richter, 562 U.S. 86, 99 (2011); Early v. Packer, 537 U.S. 3, 8 (2002).

21 The only source of “clearly established federal law” under AEDPA is “the holdings, 22 as opposed to the dicta, of [the Supreme Court’s] decisions as of the time of the relevant 23 state-court decision.” Williams, 529 U.S. at 412. Circuit precedents may in some cases 24 function as “persuasive authority,” but only “for purposes of determining whether a state

1 court decision is an ‘unreasonable application’’ of clearly established Supreme Court law.
 2 Duhaime v. Ducharme, 200 F.3d 597, 600-01 (9th Cir. 1999).

3 The prisoner has the burden of proving the facts underlying his claims by the 4 preponderance of the evidence. Silva v. Woodford, 279 F.3d 825, 835 (9th Cir. 2002).

5 VI. DISCUSSION

6 A. Ground One: Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

7 The Court first considers Petitioner’s claim that his trial attorney was ineffective for 8 failing to seek the admission under California Code of Evidence section 1202 of Brown’s
 9 statement to a defense investigator. This ineffective assistance of counsel (“IAC”) claim 10 was rejected by the California courts on direct appeal. To prevail on this claim, therefore, 11 Petitioner must show that the California courts’ rejection of this claim was contrary to or 12 an unreasonable application of the clearly established federal law as determined by the 13 Supreme Court. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d); Early, 537 U.S. at 7-8.

14 As an initial matter, this Court finds that Petitioner fairly presented this IAC claim 15 to the California Supreme Court and in his habeas corpus filings in this Court. Respondent 16 contends that Petitioner “abandoned” this IAC claim in the California Supreme Court and 17 points out that the Petition for Review “reli[ed] entirely on state law” and “fail[ed] to cite 18 the federal constitution or other federal authorities.” (Doc. No. 60-1.) As Respondent 19 frames it, this claim raises only a state law point of evidence, and therefore fails to state a 20 federal claim cognizable under AEDPA.

21 This Court disagrees with Respondent’s framing of this claim and finds that 22 Petitioner asserted a federal IAC claim in both his Petition for Review in the California 23 Supreme Court and in the FAP. The Petition for Review filed in the California Supreme 24 Court does indeed focus on the Court of Appeal’s ruling on the state law evidentiary

1 question that underlies the IAC claim. However, the Petition for Review makes clear that 2 Petitioner's appeal lay from the Court of Appeal's ruling rejecting the IAC claim as well 3 as from the subsidiary reasoning addressing the scope of Section 1202:

4 The Court of Appeal rejected [Petitioner's] claim that his counsel provided 5 ineffective assistance of counsel for failing to argue the admissibility of 6 Brown's statements under section 1202. In so ruling, the Court of Appeal 7 reasoned that 1) section 1202 does not apply to adoptive admissions ... 2) 8 section 1202 does not apply because it references the testimony of the 9 'declarant' ...; and 3) the defense did not need the statements of Brown ... In what appellant believes to be a question of first impression, he challenges as erroneous each of the court's conclusions.

10 (Doc. No. 22-23 at 17-18) (emphasis added). Petitioner also provided a detailed factual and 11 procedural basis for the claim, including the express contention that his trial attorney never 12 sought the admission of Brown's statement. It is true that Petitioner does not specify the 13 federal nature of his IAC claim. However, the standards governing IAC claims under 14 California and federal law are identical, Cal. Const., Art. 1, § 24, and, as such, the failure 15 to cite federal authorities is not fatal. This Court accordingly finds that this IAC claim has 16 been exhausted through fair presentation to California's highest court and properly raised 17 in the instant habeas corpus proceeding.

18 Turning to the merits, however, it is clear that relief is not warranted on this IAC 19 claim. Petitioner contends that Brown's statement was admissible under California 20 Evidence Code section 1202 as an exception to the rule against hearsay and that counsel's 21 failure to offer this statement in evidence constituted ineffective assistance. The California 22 Supreme Court denied Petitioner's Petition for Review in a summary opinion. This Court 23 therefore looks through to the opinion of the California Court of Appeal to determine 24

1 whether that decision was contrary to or an unreasonable application of clearly established
 2 federal law, as determined by the Supreme Court. Brumfield, 135 S.Ct. at 2276.

3 The Court of Appeal held that “Brown’s statements to the defense investigator 4 contradicting those Cooper said she made concerning Hardoy’s murder were not 5 admissible under Evidence Code section 1202” and that “Martinez’s trial counsel therefore 6 was not ineffective in failing to seek their admission on that basis.” (Doc. No. 22-22 at 28.)
 7 The court’s determination regarding the scope of Section 1202 is purely a state law matter 8 and so is not before this Court. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(a) (a state prisoner is entitled to federal 9 habeas relief “only on the ground that he is in custody in violation of the Constitution or 10 laws or treaties of the United States”); Estelle v. McGuire, 502 U.S. 62, 67-68 (1991)
 11 (“[F]ederal habeas relief does not lie for errors of state law.”).

12 The second part of the court’s ruling, on the other hand, is an adjudication of the 13 merits of Petitioner’s federal IAC claim, and this Court reviews that decision to determine 14 whether it was either contrary to or an unreasonable application of clearly established 15 federal law. 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d). The clearly established law for federal IAC claims is the 16 two step analysis outlined by the Supreme Court in Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S.
 17 668 (1984), and its progeny. Under Strickland, a prisoner asserting an IAC claim must 18 show (1) that counsel’s performance fell below an objective standard of reasonableness, 19 under prevailing norms of practice, and (2) that the defendant was prejudiced, in the sense 20 that he would have received a more favorable result but for counsel’s unprofessional errors.
 21 Id. at 687. Review of counsel’s performance is highly deferential and a petitioner must 22 overcome the strong presumption that counsel’s conduct fell within the wide range of 23 reasonable representation. Yarbrough v. Gentry, 540 U.S. 1, 5-6 (2003).

1 In this case, the Court of Appeal's denial of Petitioner's IAC claim was a reasonable 2 application of Strickland. The court's ruling that Brown's statement was not admissible
 3 under Evidence Code section 1202 and the absence of contrary precedent² strongly 4 indicates that any attempt by trial counsel to admit Brown's statement under Evidence 5 Code section 1202 would have been futile. At the very least, the failure to make an 6 argument which was later rejected by the Court of Appeal and which, even ex ante, lacked 7 a solid basis in the law of evidence, cannot be said to be objectively unreasonable. See 8 Rupe v. Wood, 93 F.3d 1434, 1445 (9th Cir. 1996) (counsel's failure to take futile action 9 is not deficient performance); Shah v. United States, 878 F.2d 1156, 1162 (9th Cir. 1989).
 10 Applying the deferential standard mandated by AEDPA, this Court finds that the Court of 11 Appeal's denial of Petitioner's IAC claim was a reasonable application of Strickland.

12 For these reasons, this Court RECOMMENDS that Plaintiff's claim that his trial
 13 counsel rendered ineffective assistance by failing to seek the admission under California 14 Code of Evidence section 1202 of Brown's statement to a defense investigator be DENIED 15 WITH PREJUDICE.

16 B. Ground Two: The Trial Court's Failure to Grant Immunity to Brown

17 The Court next considers Petitioner's argument that the trial court's failure to grant 18 Brown immunity violated Petitioner's right to a fair trial. (Doc. No. 3 at 7, 46-50.) Because 19

20

21 ² Notably, Petitioner's Petition for Review in the California Supreme Court concedes that Petitioner's 22 argument concerning the scope of Evidence Code section 1202 presents "a question of first impression"
 23 in that court. (Doc. No. 22-23, at 18.) The Petition for Review also allows that the two California appellate 24 decisions, People v. Corella, 122 Cal.App.4th 461 (2004), and People v. Baldwin, 189 Cal.App.4th 991
 25 (2010), cited to bolster Petitioner's expansive reading of Evidence Code section 1202 support Petitioner's indeed, not directly on point.

1 the California Supreme Court denied review in a summary opinion, this Court looks 2 through to the Court of Appeal's fully reasoned decision rejecting this claim to determine
 3 whether that decision was contrary to or an unreasonable application of clearly established 4 federal law. Brumfield, 135 S.Ct. at 2276.

5 The Court of Appeal rejected Petitioner's argument, finding that there was "no 6 California statute or case authorizing a trial court to grant immunity to a witness when not 7 requested to do so by the prosecutor." (Doc. No. 3 at 72.) The court noted that even if the 8 court had the inherent power to grant immunity, this case would not meet the criteria 9 because Brown's expected testimony was neither clearly exculpatory nor essential. (Id. at 10 74.) The court noted that even when a witness's testimony is clearly exculpatory and 11 essential, a court may not grant use immunity if "strong governmental interests...
 12 countervail against a grant of immunity" and the record here supports legitimate reasons 13 for not granting Brown use immunity. (Id. at 75.) The court found that "the trial court had 14 no power to grant Brown use immunity even if Martinez had asked it do so, and would 15 have had to deny any motion requesting such immunity." (Id. at 76.)

16 Respondent is correct that there is no Supreme Court authority addressing whether 17 and in what circumstances a trial court must compel the prosecution to grant immunity to 18 a defense witness. Petitioner identifies several federal Court of Appeals decisions 19 indicating that prosecutorial misconduct may, in limited circumstances, require a court to 20 grant a witness immunity. (Doc. No. 3 at 46-50, citing United States v. Westerdahl, 945 21 F.2d 1083, 1086-87 (9th Cir. 1991); United States v. Anguilo, 897 F.2d 1169, 1190-92 (1st 22 Cir. 1990); United States v. Herrera-Medina, 853 F.2d 565, 568 (7th Cir. 1988)). However, 23 the only source of clearly established federal law under AEDPA are the decisions of the 24 Supreme Court. Williams, 529 U.S. at 412. Petitioner does not identify, and this Court is

1 not aware of, any Supreme Court precedent establishing the constitutional right that 2 Petitioner asserts. This being the case, this claim must fail.

3 This Court therefore RECOMMENDS that Petitioner's claim that his right to a fair 4 trial was violated by the trial court's failure to grant Brown immunity be DENIED WITH 5 PREJUDICE.

6 C. Ground Three: Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

7 In his third ground for relief, Petitioner raises an IAC claim in which he contends 8 that trial counsel failed to make appropriate use of letters allegedly showing that "several 9 people made false claims [or] recanted outright!" (Doc. No. 3 at 8-9.) Respondent argues 10 that this IAC claim is unexhausted and entirely without merit. (Doc. No. 60-1, at 12-13).

11 1. Procedural Default

12 This IAC claim is procedurally defaulted because Petitioner has not exhausted his 13 state court remedies in regard to this claim and a return to state court would now be barred 14 by California's rule against untimely petitions. Petitioner has not shown cause for his 15 default and prejudice, or, alternatively, that failure to review this claim will cause a 16 fundamental miscarriage of justice. This IAC claim is therefore procedurally barred.

17 "An application for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of a person in custody pursuant 18 to the judgment of a State court shall not be granted unless it appears that the applicant has 19 exhausted the remedies available in the courts of the State." 28 U.S.C. § 2254(b)(1)(A). A 20 state prisoner exhausts his remedies by "fairly present[ing] his claim in each appropriate 21 state court ... thereby alerting that court to the federal nature of the claim." Baldwin v.
22 Reese, 541 U.S. 27, 29 (2004). This "rule of comity reduces the friction between the state 23 and federal court systems by avoiding the unseemliness of a federal district court's 24 overturning a state court conviction without the state courts having had an opportunity to 1 correct the constitutional violation in the first instance.” O’Sullivan v. Boerckel, 526 U.S.

 2 838, 845 (1999).

3 Where a federal claim has not been exhausted in the state courts and where no further 4 state remedies are available due to the action of an adequate and independent state 5 procedural rule, the prisoner’s claim is considered technically exhausted. Gray v.
 6 Netherland, 518 U.S. 152, 162 (1996) (noting that the exhaustion requirement “refers only 7 to remedies still available at the time of the federal petition [and] is satisfied if it is clear
 8 that the habeas petitioner’s claims are now procedurally barred under state law”); Cassett 9 v. Stewart, 406 F.3d 614, 621 n. 5 (9th Cir. 2005). A federal habeas court, however, will 10 generally not grant relief on a claim that would be barred in state court on independent and 11 adequate state procedural grounds. Casey v. Moore, 386 F.3d 896, 920 (9th Cir. 2004).
 12 Accordingly, “[t]he same procedural bar that exhausted [the prisoner’s] claims (by making 13 it impossible for him to fairly present his federal claims in state court) also renders the 14 federal claims unavailable for [federal court] review.” Id. at 921. This rule is subject to 15 exceptions in cases in which the prisoner demonstrates cause for the procedural default and 16 resulting prejudice, or that failure to consider the claim will result in a fundamental 17 miscarriage of justice. Coleman v. Thompson, 501 U.S. 722, 750 (1991).

18 California’s timeliness rule constitutes an independent and adequate state procedural 19 rule that generally prevents a federal court from reaching the merits of a prisoner’s claim.
 20 Walker v. Martin, 562 U.S. 307, 311 (2011). Unlike most states, California does not 21 employ fixed time limits for the filing of collateral relief applications. Instead, the 22 California Supreme Court has instructed that “a [habeas] petition should be filed as 23 promptly as the circumstances allow.” In re Clark, 5 Cal.4th 750, 765 n. 5 (1993). In non-24 capital cases, prisoners seeking habeas relief have “the burden of establishing either (i)

1 absence of substantial delay, as measured from the time the [prisoner] or counsel knew, or 2 reasonably should have known, of the information offered in support of the claim and the 3 legal basis for the claim, (ii) good cause for the delay, or (iii) that the claim falls within an 4 exception to the bar of untimeliness.” In re Robbins, 18 Cal.4th 770, 780 (1998).
 5 Exceptions to the bar of untimeliness occur in the case of a “fundamental miscarriage of 6 justice,” which, under California law, occurs where (i) an error of constitutional magnitude 7 led to a trial that was so fundamentally unfair that, absent the error, no reasonable judge or 8 jury would have convicted the petitioner; (ii) the petitioner is actually innocent of the 9 crimes of which he or she was convicted; (iii) the death penalty was based on a profile of 10 the petitioner so grossly misleading that, absent the error or omission, no reasonable judge 11 or juror would have imposed the sentence of death; or (iv) the petitioner was convicted or 12 sentenced under an invalid statute. Id. at 780-81.

13 Petitioner never presented this IAC claim in state court and over four and a half years
 14 have now elapsed from the date on which Petitioner first knew of the basis for this claim.³
 15 This four and a half year delay constitutes “substantial delay” under California law. See 16 Walker, 52 U.S. at 317 (noting that it was “altogether plain that [petitioner’s] delay of 17 nearly five years ranked as ‘substantial’”); see also In re Tsaturyan, 2002 WL 1614107 *3 18 (Cal.App., July 23, 2002) (delay of 16 months barred claim). Further, Petitioner cannot 19 show good cause for this delay. Petitioner asserts that he is “special ed” and has difficulty

 22 ³ The basis of this IAC claim is that Petitioner’s trial counsel did not investigate or make use of certain 23 letters allegedly provided to him by Petitioner. Accordingly, Petitioner had knowledge of the factual basis 24 for this claim at the time of his trial, which concluded with Petitioner’s sentencing on January 28, 2011.
 25 Petitioner’s “time to file” clock under California law started to run no later than that date. See Robbins, 26 18 Cal.4th at 780.
 27
 28

1 reading and spelling. (Doc. No. 3, at 5.) But while Petitioner's filings in this matter
 2 demonstrate some difficulty with spelling, Petitioner has not documented a learning
 3 disability that would render him unable to understand or meet filing deadlines. Cf. Yow 4 Ming Yeh v. Martel, 751 F.3d 1075, 1078 (9th Cir. 2014) (noting that to constitute an 5 extraordinary circumstance justifying equitable tolling of the AEDPA statute of limitations 6 a prisoner's mental impairment must render the prisoner unable to understand the 7 importance of a timely filing or unable to prepare and effectuate a filing). Petitioner also 8 asserts that certain claims raised in his petition were not raised on direct appeal due to 9 ineffective assistance of counsel. (Doc. No. 37, at 10.) Even assuming that Petitioner's 10 appellate counsel was ineffective, however, this would not explain Petitioner's failure to 11 raise this IAC claim, as well as the claim that his appellate counsel was ineffective, in a 12 state collateral proceeding. Petitioner accordingly has not shown good cause to excuse this 13 delay. Finally, this IAC claim does not fall within any of the exceptions to the California 14 timeliness bar in that Petitioner has made no showing of actual innocence or that absent 15 the asserted constitutional error no reasonable jury could have convicted him, nor has 16 Petitioner argued that he was sentenced under an invalid statute. Robbins, 18 Cal.4th at 17 780-81. This IAC claim therefore satisfies the technical requirements of exhaustion.
 18 However, the state untimeliness rule that prevents Petitioner from raising his federal claims 19 in state court also acts as an independent and adequate procedural bar that causes 20 Petitioner's claims to be defaulted—and therefore unreviewable—in this Court.

21 Petitioner's state procedural default can only be excused in this Court if Petitioner 22 shows cause for the default and prejudice as a result, or that failure to consider the claim 23 will result in a fundamental miscarriage of justice. "Cause for a procedural default exists 24 where 'something external to the petitioner, something that cannot fairly be attributed to 1 him[,...] impeded [his] efforts to comply with the State's procedural rule." Maples v.

 2 Thomas, 132 S. Ct. 912, 922 (2012). To demonstrate prejudice, a prisoner must show that 3 he suffered "actual prejudice as a result of the alleged violation of federal law." Coleman, 4 501 U.S. at 750.

5 Here, Petitioner has not established cause to excuse his procedural default. As 6 already discussed, Petitioner attempts to explain his procedural default by asserting that he 7 is "special ed" and has difficulty reading and writing and by asserting that his appellate 8 counsel was ineffective. The unsupported assertion of "special ed" status, however, is 9 insufficient to establish cause for Petitioner's substantial delay in bringing this matter
 10 before the state courts. See Schneider v. McDaniel, 674 F.3d 1144, 1153-54 (9th Cir. 2012) 11 (neither illiteracy nor mental defect with an adverse effect no more severe than illiteracy 12 will excuse procedural default). Petitioner's conclusory assertion of an IAC claim also fails 13 to establish cause because any deficiency attributed to Petitioner's appellate counsel would 14 not explain Petitioner's failure to exhaust through state collateral proceedings both this 15 underlying IAC claim and the claim that his appellate counsel was ineffective. See Edwards 16 v. Carpenter, 529 U.S. 446, 451 (2000) (holding that an IAC claim may only be used to 17 establish cause for a procedural default if it has been presented to the state courts in the 18 manner that state law requires). Denial of relief on this IAC claim also will not result in a 19 fundamental miscarriage of justice because, as discussed below, this IAC claim is wholly 20 without merit.

21 Because Petitioner has not shown cause and prejudice or that denial of this claim on 22 procedural grounds will cause a fundamental miscarriage of justice, this Court finds that 23 this claim is procedurally barred and Petitioner is not entitled to relief.

1 2. Merits

2 Relief on this unexhausted and procedurally defaulted IAC claim is also not 3 warranted for the further reason that “it is perfectly clear that [Petitioner] does not raise 4 even a colorable federal claim.” Cassett, 406 F.3d at 614; 28 U.S.C. § 2254(b)(2). Petitioner 5 alleges that he provided letters to trial counsel showing that “several people made false 6 claims [or] recanted outright!” (Doc. No. 3 at 8-9.) Petitioner claims that his counsel “never 7 [used]... the [investigators] or interviewed one and heard or spoke that I was not the actual 8 suspect. All this said information was discarded and not allowed to enter said trial or prelim
 9 [sic] after repeated [requests] to counsel that said it was unimportant.” (Doc. No. 3 at 9.)

10 The clearly established Supreme Court standard for ineffective assistance of counsel 11 claims requires a habeas petitioner to establish two prongs: (1) that counsel’s performance 12 fell below an objective standard of reasonableness, under prevailing norms of practice, and 13 (2) that the defendant was prejudiced, in the sense that he would have received a more 14 favorable result but for counsel’s unprofessional errors. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687.
 15 Further, Strickland requires that “[j]udicial scrutiny of counsel’s performance... be highly 16 deferential.” Id. at 689. There is a “strong presumption that counsel’s conduct falls within 17 a wide range of reasonable professional assistance.” Id. at 686-87.

18 To prevail on an ineffective assistance of counsel claim, a petitioner must make a 19 sufficient factual showing to substantiate the claims. United States v. Schaflander, 743 F.2d 20 714, 721 (9th Cir. 1984). A petitioner is not entitled to habeas relief based solely on 21 conclusory allegations which are unsupported by a statement of specific facts. James v.
 22 Borg, 24 F.3d 20, 26 (9th Cir. 1994). Vague and speculative assertions of counsel’s 23 ineffectiveness are insufficient. United States v. Taylor, 802 F.2d 1108, 1119 (9th Cir.
 24 1986). Furthermore, in order to show ineffective assistance of counsel based on the failure

1 to call witnesses, the defendant must show that the particular witness was willing to testify, 2 what his or her testimony would have been, and that his or her testimony would have been 3 sufficient to create a reasonable doubt as to guilt. See Alcala v. Woodford, 334 F.3d 862, 4 872-73 (9th Cir. 2003) (indicating that, to succeed on a claim of ineffective assistance of 5 counsel based upon a failure to call witnesses, a habeas petitioner not only must identify 6 the witness in question but also must describe specifically the testimony those witnesses
 7 would have given and how such testimony would have altered the trial's outcome); Bragg
 8 v. Galaza, 242 F.3d 1082, 1088 (9th Cir.), amended by 253 F.3d 1150 (2001) (petitioner's 9 mere speculation that, had a witness been interviewed, he might have given helpful 10 information, is not enough to establish ineffective assistance); United States v. Harden, 846 11 F.2d 1229, 1231-32 (9th Cir. 1988); see also Dow v. Woods, 211 F.3d 480, 486 (9th Cir.
 12 2000) (rejecting an ineffective assistance of counsel claim based on trial counsel's failure 13 to interview or call an alibi witness when there was no evidence that this witness would 14 have testified favorably for the defense); United States v. Berry, 814 F.2d 1406, 1409 (9th 15 Cir. 1987); Tinsley v. Borg, 895 F.2d 520, 532 (9th Cir. 1990).

16 Petitioner's IAC claim, as presented, is wholly deficient. Petitioner has not identified 17 the witness or witnesses who could have testified or described the exculpatory testimony 18 they could have provided. An independent review of the record, however, indicates that 19 Petitioner believes that an individual named Cesar Sidon can prove that Petitioner did not 20 kill Hardoy. (Doc. No. 22-18, at 18.) Nevertheless, Petitioner has not demonstrated that 21 Sidon or any other witnesses with exculpatory information were available and willing to 22 testify on his behalf at trial. Petitioner has not provided or even described the letters, 23 whether from Sidon or anyone else, that he says prove that certain people made false claims 24 or recanted. Petitioner has not submitted an affidavit from his trial counsel regarding his

1 knowledge of these letters. Petitioner has, in short, provided no detail whatsoever, and it is 2 therefore “perfectly clear” that this ground for relief “does not raise even a colorable federal 3 claim.” Cassett, 406 F.3d at 614.

4 Because this claim is procedurally defaulted, and because it is perfectly clear that 5 Petitioner does not raise even a colorable federal claim, this Court RECOMMENDS that 6 this claim be DENIED WITH PREJUDICE.

7 D. Ground Four: Fifth Amendment Claim

8 In his fourth ground for relief, Petitioner argues that his Fifth and Sixth Amendment 9 rights were violated when a videotaped statement he made to the police was shown to the 10 jury and because he was forced to take the stand at trial to respond to that statement. (Doc.
 11 No. 37 at 3.) Respondent argues that this claim is untimely and procedurally barred.
 12 Respondent also argues that the claim fails on the merits because Petitioner was advised of 13 his rights under Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436 (1966), including his right to remain 14 silent, and that he voluntarily waived those rights and spoke to the police. (Lodgment No.
 15 1 at 301-02.) Petitioner did not move to suppress this statement at trial or object to the 16 admission of the DVD video of his interrogation.

17 1. The AEDPA Statute of Limitations

18 This claim was asserted in the MTA, which was filed on August 19, 2014, and is 19 therefore governed by AEDPA. As amended by the AEDPA, 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d) provides:

20 (1) A 1-year period of limitation shall apply to an application for a writ
 21 of habeas corpus by a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a State 22 court. The limitation period shall run from the latest of—

23 (A) the date on which the judgement became final by the 24 conclusion of direct review or the expiration of the time for seeking such 25 review;

2 (B) the date on which the impediment to filing an application 3 created by State action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United 4 States is removed, if the applicant was prevented from filing by such State action;

5 (C) the date on which the constitutional right asserted was 6 initially recognized by the Supreme Court, if the right has been newly 7 recognized by the Supreme Court and made retroactively applicable to cases on collateral review; or

8 (D) the date on which the factual predicate of the claim or claims 9 presented could have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence.

10 (2) The time during which a properly filed application for State post-11 conviction or other collateral review with respect to the pertinent judgment 12 or claim is pending shall not be counted toward any period of limitation under this subsection.

13 In this case, Petitioner has not asserted that his filing of this claim was impeded “by 14 State action in violation of the Constitution or law of the United States.” 28 U.S.C. § 15 2244(d)(1)(B). This claim is also not premised on a newly recognized constitutional right 16 and does not rely on a factual predicate that could not have been discovered during the 17 pendency of Petitioner’s direct appeal. 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(1)(C)-(D). Accordingly, the 18 statute of limitations on this claim began to run on the date that Petitioner’s conviction 19 became final on direct review.

20 Unless a prisoner files a petition for writ of certiorari in the Supreme Court, his 21 conviction becomes final on the first non-holiday weekday ninety days after the state 22 supreme court denies the prisoner relief. Bowen v. Roe, 188 F.3d 1157, 1159 (9th Cir.
23 2002). In this case, the California Supreme Court denied Petitioner’s petition for review on

1 December 19, 2012, and Petitioner's conviction became final 90 days later, on March 19, 2 2013. (Lodgment No. 7.)

3 Petitioner did not file the MTA, which contained this claim, until August 4, 2014, 4 some five months after the expiration of the limitations period. (Doc. No. 37.) Petitioner's 5 claim is therefore untimely unless Petitioner can establish that he is entitled to statutory 6 tolling under 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(1), equitable tolling under Holland v. Florida, 560 U.S.
 7 631 (2010), that the relation-back doctrine applies to this claim, Mayle v. Felix, 545 U.S.
 8 644, 657 (2005), or that failure to consider this claim will result in a fundamental 9 miscarriage of justice, McQuiggin v. Perkins, 133 S.Ct. 1924, 1934 (2013).

10 Petitioner is not entitled to statutory tolling of this claim. AEDPA provides for 11 tolling of its one year statute of limitations for “[t]he time during which a properly filed 12 application for State post-conviction or other collateral review with respect to the pertinent 13 judgment or claim is pending.” 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(2). The pendency of a federal habeas 14 petition, however, does not trigger statutory tolling under 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(2). Duncan 15 v. Walker, 533 U.S. 167, 181-82 (2001). Nothing in the record before this Court indicates 16 that Petitioner has ever filed an application for collateral review in the state courts.
 17 Therefore, Petitioner is not entitled to statutory tolling under 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(2).

18 Nor is Petitioner entitled to equitable tolling. “[A] litigant seeking equitable tolling 19 bears the burden of establishing two elements: (1) that he has been pursuing his rights 20 diligently, and (2) that some extraordinary circumstances stood in his way.” Holland, 560
 21 U.S. at 655 (quoting Pace v. DiGuglielmo, 544 U.S. 408, 418 (2005)). Under circuit 22 precedent, “equitable tolling is available … only when extraordinary circumstances beyond 23 a prisoner’s control make it impossible to file a petition on time.” Bills v. Clark, 628 F.3d 24 1092, 1097 (9th Cir. 2010) (emphasis in original). Petitioner’s only explanation for his

1 delayed filing of this claim is his assertion that he is “special ed” and has difficulty with 2 reading and spelling. However, “[l]ow literacy levels, lack of legal knowledge, and need 3 for some assistance to prepare a habeas petition are not extraordinary circumstances to 4 warrant equitable tolling.” Baker v. California Dept. of Corrections, 484 Fed.Appx. 130, 5 131 (9th Cir. 2012). Moreover, Petitioner’s claim that he was unable to file this claim in a 6 timely fashion because of his self-declared “special ed” status is undermined by the fact 7 that Petitioner did file a timely habeas petition in this Court containing the grounds for 8 relief already discussed. Petitioner’s failure to bring forward the additional claims 9 presented in the MTA until after the expiration of the limitations period bespeaks a lack of 10 diligence, not a lack of ability. Accordingly, “Petitioner’s unsupported allegation that he 11 had a learning disability that prevented him from filing sooner does not establish 12 ‘extraordinary circumstances’ justifying equitable tolling.” Whitney v. Hedgpeth, 2009 13 WL 3194085 *12 (S.D. Cal., Sept. 29, 2009).

14 This claim also does not satisfy the relation-back doctrine. Under Rule 15(c)(2) of 15 the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, made applicable to habeas corpus proceedings by 28 16 U.S.C. § 2242, an amendment relates back to the date of the original pleading when the 17 claim asserted in the amended pleading and the claim asserted in the original pleading 18 “arose out of the same conduct, transaction, or occurrence.” In the habeas corpus context, 19 new claims asserted in an amended pleading will relate back “only when the claims added 20 by amendment arise from the same core facts as the timely filed claims, and not when the 21 new claims depend upon events separate in ‘both time and type’ from the originally raised 22 episodes.” Mayle, 545 U.S. at 657. Petitioner’s Fifth Amendment claim, which is based 23 on an alleged Miranda violation at Petitioner’s interrogation, does not arise from the same 24 core facts as any of the claims timely asserted in the FAP, each of which concerned the

1 actions of the attorneys and the court during Petitioner's trial. This claim therefore does 2 not relate back to the date of the FAP.

3 Finally, application of the statute of limitations to bar review of this claim would not 4 result in a fundamental miscarriage of justice. The fundamental miscarriage of justice 5 exception to the statute of limitations is only available where the prisoner makes "a credible 6 showing of actual innocence," Mcquiggin, 133 S.Ct. at 1931, by showing that "it is more 7 likely than not that no reasonable juror would have convicted him in the light of the new 8 evidence, id. at 1935 (quoting Schlup v. Delo, 513 U.S. 298, 327 (1995)). In the claim 9 currently under review, Petitioner challenges the admission into evidence of his video-10 taped statement. Even assuming that the admission of the video-tape was error, however, 11 Petitioner does not come close to meeting the stringent miscarriage of justice standard.
 12 Notably, Petitioner's video-taped statement did not include a confession to the murder and 13 this Court's review of the transcript of Petitioner's trial indicates that Petitioner's 14 conviction rested on other direct and circumstantial evidence adduced at trial. Accordingly, 15 it cannot be said that the constitutional violation asserted here resulted in the conviction of 16 one who was actually innocent.

17 For these reasons, the Court finds that AEDPA's statute of limitations bars relief on 18 Petitioner's Fifth Amendment claim.

19 2. This Claim is Procedurally Barred

20 Petitioner never presented this claim to the California courts and therefore has failed
 21 to exhaust his state remedies in regard to this claim as required by 28 U.S.C. §
 22 2254(b)(1)(A). Indeed, no California court has ever ruled on this claim, because Petitioner 23 did not move to suppress his statement or object to the admission of the DVD video of his 24 interrogation. A return to state court, however, would be barred by California's rule against

1 untimely petitions. Robbins, 18 Cal.4th at 780. This claim is therefore deemed technically 2 exhausted but procedurally defaulted. Gray, 518 U.S. at 162; Casey, 386 F.3d at 920. As 3 discussed in section IV(C)(1), above, at pages 16-18, Petitioner has not shown cause for 4 his default and prejudice or that failure to review this claim will cause a fundamental 5 miscarriage of justice. Coleman, 501 U.S. at 750. This claim is therefore procedurally 6 barred, and, for this reason, should be denied.

3. Merits

The Court has addressed the merits of Petitioner’s other unexhausted claims because a district court may deny even an unexhausted claim on the merits when “it is perfectly clear that [Petitioner] does not raise even a colorable federal claim.” Cassett, 406 F.3d at 614. In this ground for relief, Petitioner claims that his Fifth Amendment rights were violated when the prosecution played to the jury a DVD video of his custodial interview that was obtained contrary to Petitioner’s specific request that the recording device be turned off. This claim is quite clearly untimely and procedurally barred, not least because Petitioner did not object at trial to the admission of the DVD. Procedural defects aside, however, the Court is not able to say that it is “perfectly clear” that this claim lacks merit.

1 Nevertheless, as discussed above, this claim is barred by AEDPA's statute of 2 limitations and is procedurally defaulted. This Court therefore RECOMMENDS that this 3 claim be DENIED WITH PREJUDICE.

4 E. Ground Five: Ineffective Assistance of Appellate Counsel

5 Next, Petitioner claims that his appellate attorney was ineffective for not raising the 6 claims asserted in Ground Four. (Doc. No. 37 at 6.) Respondent argues that this claim is 7 untimely under AEDPA, procedurally defaulted, and meritless because counsel is not 8 ineffective for failing to present a futile argument.

9 1. The AEDPA Statute of Limitations

10 This claim was asserted in the MTA, which was filed on August 19, 2014, and is 11 therefore governed by AEDPA's one year statute of limitations. Because Petitioner does 12 not assert that his filing of this claim was impeded by unlawful state action and because 13 Petitioner's claim is not based on a newly recognized constitutional right or recently
 14 discovered facts, the limitations period on this claim started to run March 19, 2013, the 15 date on which Petitioner's conviction became final on direct appeal. Petitioner filed this 16 claim on August 19, 2014, five months after the statute of limitations expired. This claim 17 will therefore be deemed untimely unless Petitioner demonstrates an entitlement to 18 statutory or equitable tolling, that the claim relates back to a timely asserted claim, or that 19 failure to review this claim will result in a fundamental miscarriage of justice. Petitioner
 20 has not made any such showing. Petitioner is not entitled to statutory tolling for the simple 21 reason that Petitioner never presented this or any other claim in a state court application 22 for collateral review. Petitioner is not entitled to equitable tolling because he has failed to 23 show that "extraordinary circumstances beyond [his] control [made] it impossible to file a 24 petition on time." Bills, 628 F.3d at 1097; Baker, 484 Fed.Appx. at 1031. This IAC claim

1 also does not relate back to the date of the IAC claim timely asserted in the FAP because 2 it arises from alleged deficiencies in the performance of Petitioner's counsel on direct 3 appeal whereas the earlier IAC claim arises from alleged deficiencies in the performance 4 of Petitioner's trial counsel. This claim is therefore "separate in 'both time and type'" from 5 IAC claim asserted in the FAP and the relation back doctrine does not apply. Mayle, 545 6 U.S. at 657. Finally, as discussed below, this claim is without merit, and so failure to 7 consider this claim will not result in a fundamental miscarriage of justice. Accordingly, 8 none of the statutory or equitable exceptions to the one year statute of limitations apply and 9 this claim must be deemed untimely.

10 2. Procedural Default

11 Petitioner never presented this claim to the California courts and therefore has failed
 12 to exhaust his state remedies in regard to this claim as required by 28 U.S.C. §
 13 2254(b)(1)(A). A return to state court, however, would now be barred by California's rule 14 against untimely petitions. Robbins, 18 Cal.4th at 780. This claim is therefore deemed 15 technically exhausted but procedurally defaulted. Gray, 518 U.S. at 162; Casey, 386 F.3d 16 at 920. As discussed in section IV(C)(1), Petitioner has not shown cause for his default and 17 prejudice or that failure to review this claim will cause a fundamental miscarriage of 18 justice. Coleman, 501 U.S. at 750. This claim is therefore procedurally barred and relief is 19 not warranted.

20 3. Merits

21 Relief on this procedurally defaulted and untimely IAC claim is also not warranted
 22 for the additional reason that "it is perfectly clear that [Petitioner] does not raise even a
 23 colorable federal claim." Cassett, 406 F.3d at 614; 28 U.S.C. § 2254(b)(2). Petitioner 24 argues that his appellate counsel was ineffective for not arguing that his right against self-

1 incrimination was violated when his videotaped statement was played for the jury. (Doc.
 2 No. 37 at 6.) Respondent counters that counsel is not ineffective for failing to present a 3 meritless argument. (Doc. No. 60 at 20.)

4 The due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment guarantees a criminal 5 defendant the right to the effective assistance of counsel on his first appeal as of right.
 6 Evitts v. Lucey, 469 U.S. 387, 396 (1985); Miller v. Keeney, 882 F.2d 1428, 1431 (9th Cir.
 7 1989). Claims that appellate counsel rendered ineffective assistance are evaluated using 8 the two pronged Strickland analysis. Smith v. Robbins, 528 U.S. 259, 285 (2000). The 9 party challenging the performance of appellate counsel must first show that appellate 10 counsel performed deficiently by unreasonably failing to discover and assert nonfrivolous 11 issues. Id. Second, the party seeking relief must show that he has suffered prejudice, which, 12 in this context, means that his appeal would more likely than not have been granted had his 13 attorney's performance not been deficient. Id. Appellate counsel is not deficient simply 14 because he or she declines to brief every conceivable claim of error. Miller, 882 F.2d at 15 1434. Indeed, "the weeding out of weaker issues is widely recognized as one of the 16 hallmarks of effective appellate advocacy." Id. And, of course, "the failure to raise a 17 meritless legal argument does not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel." Shah, 878 18 F.2d at 1162.

19 In this case, the failure of Petitioner's appellate counsel to assert that Petitioner was 20 compelled to testify against himself in violation of his Fifth and Sixth Amendment rights 21 does not raise a colorable IAC because Petitioner forfeited this argument by failing to 22 object to the admission into evidence of the video tape. See Cal. Evid. Code § 353 ("A 23 verdict or finding shall not be set aside ... by reason of the erroneous admission of evidence 24 unless ... [t]here appears of record an objection to or a motion to exclude or to strike the

1 evidence that was timely made and so stated as to make clear the specific ground of the 2 objection or motion."); see also People v. Partida, 37 Cal.4th 428, 433-35 (2005). This 3 failure to raise the issue with the trial court precluded Petitioner's appellate counsel from 4 raising the issue on appeal. Because the failure to raise a futile argument on appeal does 5 not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel, this claim is wholly without merit.⁴

6 Because this IAC claim is untimely under AEDPA, procedurally defaulted, and 7 because it is perfectly clear that this ground for relief does not raise a colorable federal 8 claim, this Court accordingly RECOMMENDS that this claim be DENIED WITH 9 PREJUDICE.

10 F. Ground Six: Ineffective Assistance of Trial Counsel

11 Next, Petitioner argues that his counsel was ineffective for failing to make use of 12 documents showing that he suffered a stroke when he was eight years old. (Doc. No. 37 at 13 6.) This claim was raised for the first time in the MTA, and the medical records in question 14 are attached to that document. (Doc. No. 37 at 29-70.) Respondent argues that this claim is 15 untimely and procedurally barred. Respondent also argues that this claim fails on the merits 16 because Petitioner did not show that he was affected by this medical condition at the time 17 of the murder and because Petitioner did not show that his trial counsel's decision not to 18 present evidence of Petitioner's childhood medical condition was anything other than a 19 reasonable strategic choice. (Doc. No. 60 at 20.)

 21
 22⁴ The only vehicle for appellate counsel to have raised this issue would have been through an IAC claim.
 23 Appellate counsel did not do so, and Petitioner does not challenge that decision. Even if this Court 24 construed Petitioner's IAC claim to reach the failure of appellate counsel to assert an IAC claim in regard 25 to trial counsel's failure to object to the admission of the video tape, relief would not be warranted because 26 this IAC claim would be both untimely and procedurally barred.
 27

1. The AEDPA Statute of Limitations

As this claim was asserted in the MTA, filed on August 19, 2014, it is governed by AEDPA's one year statute of limitations. Because Petitioner does not assert that his filing of this claim was impeded by unlawful state action and because Petitioner's claim is not based on a newly recognized constitutional right or recently discovered facts, the limitations period on this claim started to run March 19, 2013, the date on which Petitioner's conviction became final on direct appeal. Petitioner filed this claim on August 19, 2014, five months after the statute of limitations expired. This claim will therefore be deemed untimely unless Petitioner demonstrates an entitlement to statutory or equitable tolling, that the claim relates back to a timely asserted claim, or that failure to review this claim will result in a fundamental miscarriage of justice. Petitioner makes no such showing. Petitioner is not entitled to statutory tolling because Petitioner never presented this or any other claim in a state court application for collateral review. Petitioner is not entitled to equitable tolling because he has failed to show that "extraordinary circumstances beyond [his] control [made] it impossible to file a petition on time." Bills, 628 F.3d at 1097; Baker, 484 Fed.Appx. at 1031. This IAC claim also does not relate back to the date of the IAC claim timely asserted in the FAP. That IAC claim centered on trial counsel's failure to make use of letters purportedly showing that witnesses had recanted or offered false testimony, while this IAC claim centeres on trial counsel's failure to seek the admission of evidence relating to Petitioner's medical condition. This claim is therefore "separate in 'both time and type'" from IAC claim asserted in the FAP and the relation back doctrine does not apply. Mayle, 545 U.S. at 657. Finally, as discussed below, this claim is without merit, and so failure to consider this claim will not result in a fundamental miscarriage of justice. Accordingly, none of the statutory or equitable exceptions to the one year statute of limitations apply and this claim must be deemed untimely and therefore denied.

2. Procedural Default

Petitioner never presented this claim to the California courts and therefore has failed to exhaust his state remedies in regard to this claim as required by 28 U.S.C. § 2254(b)(1)(A). A return to state court, however, would now be barred by California's rule against untimely petitions. Robbins, 18 Cal.4th at 780. This claim is therefore deemed technically exhausted but procedurally defaulted. Gray, 518 U.S. at 162; Casey, 386 F.3d at 920. As discussed in section IV(C)(1), above, at pages 16-18, Petitioner has not shown cause for his default and prejudice or that failure to review this claim will cause a fundamental miscarriage of justice. Coleman, 501 U.S. at 750. This claim is therefore procedurally barred and should be denied.

3. Merits

This procedurally defaulted and untimely IAC claim should also be denied for the additional reason that “it is perfectly clear that [Petitioner] does not raise even a colorable federal claim.” Cassett, 406 F.3d at 614; 28 U.S.C. § 2254(b)(2).

The clearly established Supreme Court standard for ineffective assistance of counsel claims requires a habeas petitioner to establish (1) that counsel's performance fell below an objective standard of reasonableness, under prevailing norms of practice, and (2) that the defendant was prejudiced, in the sense that he would have received a more favorable result but for counsel's unprofessional errors. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687. Further, Strickland requires that “[j]udicial scrutiny of counsel’s performance ... be highly deferential.” Id. at 689. There is a “strong presumption that counsel’s conduct falls within a wide range of reasonable professional assistance.” Id. at 686-87. “[S]trategic choices

1 made after thorough investigation of law and facts relevant to plausible options are virtually 2 unchallengeable.” Id. at 690.

3 Petitioner claims that his counsel should have made use of documents showing that 4 he suffered a childhood stroke. This claim has no merit. First, Petitioner has not articulated 5 any ground for the relevance and admissibility of these medical records and has not 6 suggested how these medical records would have assisted him at trial. Notably, Petitioner 7 did not offer a mental defense at trial, and the decision not to offer such a defense is 8 precisely the kind of strategic decision that is entrusted to the reasonable discretion of trial 9 counsel. See Knowles v. Mirzayance, 556 U.S. 111, 124 (2009).

10 Second, this Court’s own review of the record indicates that Petitioner’s childhood 11 stroke was indeed raised during Petitioner’s trial and that medical records relating to this 12 stroke were lodged with the trial court prior to sentencing. To the point, Petitioner’s trial 13 testimony on direct examination began with a discussion of how the stroke that he suffered 14 at age eight had affected his life, including how Petitioner “had to be in special ed” and 15 “had to learn how to walk, talk . . . had to learn everything over again.” (Doc. No. 22-14, p.
 16 82.) Petitioner’s trial counsel also filed medical records documenting Petitioner’s 17 childhood stroke with the clerk prior to sentencing. (Doc. No. 22-18, p. 14). In any event, 18 the sentence imposed on Petitioner for his conviction of murder in the first degree was 19 mandatory, Cal. Penal Code section 190(a), so any further work that Petitioner’s trial 20 counsel may have done to investigate Petitioner’s medical condition as a mitigating factor 21 would have been futile. This IAC claim accordingly has no merit.

22 Because this claim is untimely under AEDPA and procedurally defaulted, and 23 because it is perfectly clear that Petitioner does not raise even a colorable federal claim, 24 this Court RECOMMENDS that this claim be DENIED WITH PREJUDICE.

1 G. Ground Seven: Admission of Petitioner's Out-of-Court Statements

2 Next, Petitioner argues that statements he made to witness Homero Hernandez were 3 inadmissible hearsay. (Doc. No. 37 at 8.) Respondent argues that this claim is untimely 4 and procedurally barred. Respondent also argues that this claim asserts only a state law 5 error and is therefore not cognizable under AEDPA.

6 1. The AEDPA Statute of Limitations

7 This claim was asserted in the MTA, which was filed on August 19, 2014, and is 8 therefore governed by AEDPA's one year statute of limitations. Because Petitioner does 9 not assert that his filing of this claim was impeded by unlawful state action and because 10 Petitioner's claim is not based on a newly recognized constitutional right or recently
 11 discovered facts, the limitations period on this claim started to run March 19, 2013, the 12 date on which Petitioner's conviction became final on direct appeal. Petitioner filed this 13 claim on August 19, 2014, five months after the statute of limitations expired. This claim 14 will therefore be deemed untimely unless Petitioner demonstrates an entitlement to 15 statutory or equitable tolling, that the claim relates back to a timely asserted claim, or that 16 failure to review this claim will result in a fundamental miscarriage of justice. Petitioner
 17 has not made any such showing. Petitioner is not entitled to statutory tolling as Petitioner
 18 never presented this or any other claim in a state court application for collateral review.
 19 Petitioner is not entitled to equitable tolling because he has failed to show that 20 "extraordinary circumstances beyond [his] control [made] it impossible to file a petition on 21 time." Bills, 628 F.3d at 1097; Baker, 484 Fed.Appx. at 1031. This claim is also "separate 22 in 'both time and type'" from the claims, including the evidentiary claims, asserted in the 23 FAP, and the relation back doctrine accordingly does not apply. Mayle, 545 U.S. at 657.
 24 Finally, as discussed below, this claim is wholly without merit, and so failure to consider

1 this claim will not result in a fundamental miscarriage of justice. Accordingly, none of the 2 statutory or equitable exceptions to the one year statute of limitations apply and this claim 3 must be deemed untimely and should be denied.

2. Procedural Default

Petitioner never presented this claim to the California courts and therefore has failed to exhaust his state remedies in regard to this claim as required by 28 U.S.C. § 2254(b)(1)(A). A return to state court, however, would now be barred by California's rule against untimely petitions. Robbins, 18 Cal.4th at 780. This claim is therefore deemed technically exhausted but procedurally defaulted. Gray, 518 U.S. at 162; Casey, 386 F.3d at 920. As discussed in section IV(C)(1), above, at pages 16-18, Petitioner has not shown cause for his default and prejudice or that failure to review this claim will cause a fundamental miscarriage of justice. Coleman, 501 U.S. at 750. This claim is therefore procedurally barred and should be denied.

3. Merits

15 Relief on this procedurally defaulted and untimely IAC claim is also not warranted
16 for the additional reason that “it is perfectly clear that [Petitioner] does not raise even a
17 colorable federal claim.” Cassett, 406 F.3d at 614; 28 U.S.C. § 2254(b)(2). Petitioner 18 contends that the statements he made to Hernandez were hearsay inadmissible under 19 Evidence Code section 1200. Petitioner also cites the Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments.
20 Petitioner does not elaborate on his constitutional claims, but his citation to People v.
21 Thomas, 53 Cal.4th 771 (2012), alerts the Court to the presence of a claim that the 22 admission of this evidence violated his rights under the Confrontation Clause of the Sixth 23 Amendment.

1 As Respondent correctly notes, state law evidentiary error is not cognizable on 2 federal habeas corpus. Petitioner's claim that Hernandez's testimony regarding Petitioner's 3 out-of-court statement was inadmissible hearsay under Evidence Code section 1200 is a 4 classically state law claim and, as such, is not one on which a federal habeas court may 5 grant relief.⁵ Petitioner's Confrontation Clause claim also fails as a criminal defendant's 6 own out-of-court statements are not testimonial and do not implicate the Confrontation 7 Clause. See United States v. Crowe, 563 F.3d 969, 976 n. 12 (9th Cir. 2009); see also 8 United States v. Spencer, 592 F.3d 866, 878 (8th Cir. 2010). Finally, to the extent that 9 Petitioner's citation to the Fourteenth Amendment raises a due process claim, such a claim 10 has no basis and is rejected.

11 Because this claim is untimely under AEDPA and procedurally defaulted, and 12 because it is perfectly clear that this ground for relief does not raise even a colorable federal 13 claim, this Court RECOMMENDS that this claim be DENIED WITH PREJUDICE.

14 H. Ground Eight: Arbitrary and Discriminatory Prosecution

15 In his final claim, Petitioner asserts that he has been subjected to arbitrary and 16 discriminatory prosecution in violation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth 17 Amendment. (Doc. No. 37 at 9.) Respondent argues that this claim is untimely and 18 procedurally barred. Respondent also asserts that this claim fails on the merits because 19 Petitioner failed to meet his burden of proving this claim by a preponderance of evidence.

22

24 ⁵ Petitioner's statement to Hernandez was, in any case, the admission of a party, and therefore was 25 admissible under Evidence Code section 1220.

28

1 1. The AEDPA Statute of Limitations

2 This claim was asserted in the MTA, which was filed on August 19, 2014, and is
 3 therefore governed by AEDPA's one year statute of limitations. Because Petitioner does 4 not assert that his filing of this claim was impeded by unlawful state action and because 5 Petitioner's claim is not based on a newly recognized constitutional right or recently
 6 discovered facts, the limitations period on this claim started to run March 19, 2013, the 7 date on which Petitioner's conviction became final on direct appeal. Petitioner filed this
 8 claim on August 19, 2014, five months after the statute of limitations expired. This claim 9 will therefore be deemed untimely unless Petitioner demonstrates an entitlement to 10 statutory or equitable tolling, that the claim relates back to a timely asserted claim, or that 11 failure to review this claim will result in a fundamental miscarriage of justice. Petitioner
 12 has not made any such showing. Petitioner is not entitled to statutory tolling as Petitioner
 13 never presented this or any other claim in a state court application for collateral review.
 14 Petitioner is not entitled to equitable tolling because he has failed to show that 15 "extraordinary circumstances beyond [his] control [made] it impossible to file a petition on 16 time." Bills, 628 F.3d at 1097; Baker, 484 Fed.Appx. at 1031. This claim is also does not 17 relate back to any claim timely asserted in the FAP as it is "separate in 'both time and 18 type'" from those claims. Mayle, 545 U.S. at 657. Finally, as discussed below, this claim 19 is wholly without merit, and so failure to consider this claim will not result in a fundamental 20 miscarriage of justice. Accordingly, none of the statutory or equitable exceptions to the one 21 year statute of limitations apply and this claim must be deemed untimely.

22 2. Procedural Default

23 Petitioner never presented this claim to the California courts and therefore has failed
 24 to exhaust his state remedies in regard to this claim as required by 28 U.S.C. §

1 2254(b)(1)(A). A return to state court, however, would now be barred by California's rule
 2 against untimely petitions. Robbins, 18 Cal.4th at 780. This claim is therefore deemed
 3 technically exhausted but procedurally defaulted. Gray, 518 U.S. at 162; Casey, 386 F.3d
 4 at 920. As discussed in section IV(C)(1), above, at pages 16-18, Petitioner has not shown 5 cause for his default and prejudice or that failure to review this claim will cause a 6 fundamental miscarriage of justice. Coleman, 501 U.S. at 750. This claim is therefore 7 procedurally barred.

8 3. Merits

9 Relief on this procedurally defaulted and untimely equal protection claim is also not 10 warranted for the additional reason that "it is perfectly clear that [Petitioner] does not raise 11 even a colorable federal claim." Cassett, 406 F.3d at 614; 28 U.S.C. § 2254(b)(2). Petitioner
 12 claims that his prosecution was arbitrary and discriminatory. As Respondent points out, 13 however, Petitioner has offered no evidence that the decision to prosecute him was based 14 on an illegitimate motive.

15 The government has "broad discretion" to decide whom to prosecute. Wayte v.
 16 United States, 470 U.S. 598, 607 (1985). "[S]o long as a prosecutor has probable cause to 17 believe that the accused committed a crime defined by statute, the decision whether or not 18 to prosecute ... generally rests entirely in [the prosecutor's] discretion. Bodenkircher v.
 19 Hayes, 434 U.S. 357, 364 (1978). Nevertheless, selectivity in the enforcement of criminal 20 laws is subject to constitutional constraints, including those of the the Equal Protection 21 Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment. See United States v. Armstrong, 517 U.S. 456, 464
 22 (1996); see also Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 373-74 (1886). To demonstrate 23 impermissible discriminatory or selective prosecution, the petitioner must demonstrate that

1 others similarly situated have not been prosecuted and that the prosecution is based on an 2 impermissible motive. Armstrong, 517 U.S. at 565.

3 Petitioner offers no evidence that the decision to prosecute him was based on 4 anything other than the considerable direct and circumstantial evidence of his guilt that was 5 adduced at trial. Petitioner does not identify an illegitimate motive underlying his 6 prosecution, much less point to evidence showing that similarly situated persons have not 7 been prosecuted. In short, Petitioner's claims of arbitrary and discriminatory prosecution 8 are entirely conclusory and without merit.

9 Because this claim is untimely under AEDPA and procedurally defaulted, and 10 because it is perfectly clear that this ground for relief does not raise even a colorable federal 11 claim, this Court RECOMMENDS that this claim be DENIED WITH PREJUDICE.

12 V. CONCLUSION

13 The Court submits this Report and Recommendation to United States District Judge 14 Barry Ted Moskowitz under 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1) and Local Civil Rule 72.1(d)(4) of the 15 United States District Court for the Southern District of California.

16 Further, IT IS HEREBY RECOMMENDED that the Court issue an order: (1) 17 approving and adopting this Report and Recommendation, and (2) directing that Judgment 18 be entered DENYING the Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus WITH PREJUDICE.

19 IT IS ORDERED that no later than October 23, 2015, any party to this action may 20 file written objections with the Court and serve a copy on all parties. The document should 21 be captioned "Objections to Report and Recommendation."

22 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that any reply to the objections shall be filed with the 23 Court and served on all parties no later than November 20, 2015. The parties are advised 24 that failure to file objections within the specified time may waive the right to raise those

1 objections on appeal of the Court's order. See Turner v. Duncan, 158 F.3d 449, 455 (9th 2 Cir. 1998); Martinez v. Ylst, 951 F.2d 1153, 1156 (9th Cir. 1991).

3 IT IS SO ORDERED.
